"THE VOICE OF AMERICA ON KISHINEFF"

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS

The Editor of "The Voice of America on Kishineff" is desirous of making a few additions and corrections that have been called to his attention since the publication of the book.

GALESBURG, ILLINOIS

On p. 89, under Galesburg, Illinois, it is reported that Mayor George Shumway issued an appeal for a public meeting. The copy of the appeal and the account of the meeting given below came to hand too late for publication:

Not only the Jewish people but the civilized world stands aghast at the horrors of Kishineff. Such barbarism should not be allowed to go unheeded by civilized nations.

Therefore let all the good people of Galesburg, Illinois, unite in condemning these atrocities, and in generously responding to the pitiful cry for help which comes to us from across the sea.

All are earnestly invited to meet for action at the Mayor's Office this evening at 8 o'clock, May 20, 1903.

GEORGE SHUMWAY, Mayor.

A large number of the prominent citizens attended this meeting, and it was determined to hold a public mass meeting, and after speeches were made by Mayor Shumway, Honorable Mack J. Mack, Frank J. Sisson, of the Daily Mail, and George Perry, of the Daily Republican Register, the committee appointed for that purpose reported the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, At a meeting of citizens held on the evening of May 20, 1903, the undersigned were appointed a committee to arrange for a mass meeting to protest against the horrible brutalities perpetrated upon the Jews of Kishineff, Russia; and

WHEREAS, It is thought best to hold a public mass meeting to arouse sentiment against such outrages and to protest in the name of humanity against this wave of fanaticism which seems to be sweeping across the far-away Eastern countries;

Therefore, Acting in accordance with instructions heretofore given, a public mass meeting of men and women is hereby called for Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, and all are earnestly urged to come.

PORTLAND, OREGON

Among the numerous newspaper clippings examined by the Editor, several referred to the large sum of money collected for the Kishineff sufferers in Portland, Oregon, but it happened that none referred to the meeting held there, in the Synagogue of the Congregation Talmud Torah, on Sunday, May 17, 1903, at which the principal speakers were Ben Selling, Rabbi N. M. Mosessoehn, D. Solis Cohen, Judge John T. Caples, and Rabbi S. S. Wise.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

On p. 187, an account is given of the meeting held in St. Louis, Mo., at Shaare Emeth Temple, on May 24, 1903, under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association. By a clerical error the name of one of the speakers is omitted, that of the Reverend Doctor Samuel Sale, in whose synagogue the meeting took place, and also the name of Rabbi H. J. Messing, who delivered the opening prayer.
The Editor takes this opportunity to give publicity to the report of the Committee in charge of the Kishineff Relief Fund, which ended its labors January 25, 1904. The report was published in July, 1904. It states that 1,010,343.30 roubles came in to Kishineff from 728 towns, 663 of which are in Russia. The following account is given of the money:

533,573.35 roubles distributed among the plundered.
100,200.00 roubles distributed among orphans.
156,071.86 roubles distributed among merchants.
15,390.00 roubles distributed among emigrants.
13,056.94 roubles spent for food and clothing.
3,041.00 roubles spent for medical assistance.
23,057.00 roubles for a soup kitchen.
581.03 roubles for the burial of the mutilated Torah Scrolls.
4,041.00 roubles for Relief Committees' expenses.
14,700.00 roubles for legal expenses.
16,748.24 roubles spent in repairing public and private buildings.
50,000.00 roubles given to the Jewish Colonization Association to found a Jewish colony in Bessarabia.
50,000.00 roubles set aside to found a colony in Palestine for 50 Kishineff families.

After the payment of unclassified items the balance, 11,035.88, was handed over to the representatives of the local Jewish community to assist special cases.

Editor.

The Board of Trustees meets in the evening of the third Wednesday of January, March, June, and October.

The Publication Committee meets in the afternoon of the first Sunday of January, February, March, October, November, and December.

MEETING OF THE SIXTEENTH YEAR

The meeting of the Jewish Publication Society of America was held Wednesday afternoon, May 22, 1904, in the Assembly Hall of the Keneseth Israel Temple, Broad Street above Columbia Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

The President of the Society, Mr. Edwin Wolf, called the meeting to order.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. David Davidson, of New York City.

PRESIDENT’S ADDRESS

The President delivered the following address:

The Jewish Publication Society of America can point to various achievements this year.

First is the publication of the first instalment of the new English Bible translation. Our Book of Psalms, in a dainty leather binding clearly printed, is not only an attractive production in the mechanical make-up, but—what is of more importance—it is a product of the highest scholarship, both as to literalness of translation and as to style. It is a volume symbolic of the culture of the twentieth century Jew of America, a valuable stone in the monument of learning the Jewish people of the United States are rearing for themselves.

Our second achievement is the publication of two volumes in relation to the Kishineff affair. Last year’s meeting directed the publication and distribution of material bearing upon the condition of the Jews in Russia. We accordingly arranged with the publishers for the publication of a special edition of "Within the Pale." The author of the volume, Michael Davitt, being a trained non-Jewish writer, his strong impartial story of Kishineff has been effective in helping to form an unprejudiced opinion of the Russian atrocities.

The other volume is "The Voice of America on Kishineff," edited by Dr. Cyrus Adler. A resumé of the discourses, the resolutions, and the editorials, by Jews and non-Jews throughout the country, expressive of the feelings and the opinions of Americans on the barbarian acts of Russians against their townsmen, this volume will stand in the history of civilization as a record of the sympathetic, humanitarian attitude of Americans toward the Jews.

Owing to the fact that a special Kishineff Fund was available, we were enabled to give both volumes wider publicity than is the case with our ordinary publications.

In addition to the three books referred to, we issued the Year Book, the first of the fiscal year's publications, and "In Assyrian Tents," a juvenile story, the last of the year's books.

This makes altogether fifty-one separate volumes during the history of the society. We have distributed upwards of 225,000 copies of our various works.

An achievement which we are confident will strengthen our work on its administrative side is the formation of the New York Committee, with Mr. Cyrus L. Sulzberger as Chairman. This committee has established an office on the East Side of New York City and organized an auxiliary Society there. Much interest has been shown in the quarters in which the committee has made propaganda, and it is expected that eventually there will be a material increase of membership as a result of the efforts of this committee. New York, with its large Jewish population, should contribute a very large proportionate number of the membership of this society.

Our membership has not varied much in recent years. It still remains about five thousand. Additions have come chiefly through our representative, Mrs. K. H. Scherman. During the fall and winter she made a trip through the Southern States, and the results of her canvass show themselves in an increased membership in that section of the country. As, however, there are losses by death and resignations our total number of members is not much larger than before.

We have been helped financially through special contributions to the Kishineff Fund, and I most heartily thank the several contributors.

It is my sad province to speak of a learned man whose death was a loss to the community in general, but particularly to us. Since the Society was formed Dr. Jastrow was a member of its Publication Committee, and in his later years he devoted himself largely to the most important work which the Publication Society has ever attempted—a translation of the Bible. For this task, a life of study had fitted Dr. Jastrow, and it will be a most difficult matter to replace him as Editor of the Bible Translation.

The death of Mr. Simon A. Stern has removed one whom the community delighted to honor because he so signally brought honor to it. For years he, too, had been a member of our Publication Committee, ever since the Society was organized, and all those who know how helpful his broad ideas were, will appreciate the loss which the Society has suffered.
And we have to mourn still another who, almost since the beginning of its existence, had served the Society, as treasurer, director, and then as second vice-president, Mr. Herman Friedman, whose sudden death was a matter of deep regret to the Society.

With these losses, we can refer to at least one gain among our governing committees and officers. Dr. Solomon Schechter, president of the faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary, was chosen a member of the Publication Committee to succeed Dr. Jastrow.

Mr. Morris Dannenbaum, who served the Society as treasurer for some years, declining re-election, we chose Mr. Herman Fernberger for the office.

I thank the officers and members of committees for helping me in the management of the society.

Year after year the Society is increasing the number and variety of publications on Jewish subjects in the English language. Year after year the number and variety from other sources are increasing. The Jewish Publication Society and the Jewish Encyclopedia are supplying material for Jewish study; students of Jewish subjects are applying themselves to the study of books in English; Jewish societies are promoting a knowledge of Jewish problems. We are laying the foundation for a Jewish renaissance in America.

With some degree of confidence I ask your continued and increasing help for our work. For centuries the enemies of Judaism have been presenting their side to the public. The aim of the Publication Society is to bring before that generally impartial judge the Jewish standpoint; to teach it our history, our philosophy, our ideals, and in teaching, better to learn them ourselves. Is there any better way by which to change the prejudice and misunderstanding which arises from ignorance than by the sympathy and appreciation which knowledge of what we have done and thought, and of what we are doing and thinking would create?

I, therefore, hope the Jews of the United States will more and more realize the great work this Society is doing. The greater the number that join our ranks, the greater the interest shown in our purpose, the more powerful becomes our influence in furnishing information on Jewish subjects, in stimulating a study of Jewish problems, and in moulding public opinion. I appeal, therefore, to Jews throughout the land to help us make this organization strong in members, so that it may be strong in its effect on Jewish development, that it may go from “strength to strength.”

Organization of the Meeting

Dr. Jacob H. Hollander, of Baltimore, was called upon to act as chairman of the meeting.

Dr. Hollander delivered an address.

Dr. Charles S. Bernheimer acted as secretary of the meeting.

Report of the Board of Directors

The report of the Board of Directors was presented in printed form to the members. It is as follows:

Mrs. K. H. Scherman, our representative, has canvassed for members during the past year chiefly in the Southern States.

THE FISCAL YEAR

In view of the requirement to hold the annual meeting in May, it has been decided to begin the fiscal year hereafter on May 1st, instead of June 1st, so that all reports and accounts may be concluded on the former date. Heretofore there has been a lack of uniformity as to the dates on which accounts were closed for report to the annual meeting.

NEW YORK COMMITTEE

The formation of a New York Committee, with Cyrus L. Sulzberger as Chairman, will be most helpful in promoting the influence of the Society. The Committee has formed an auxiliary society and opened an office on the East Side, and has planned other means for stimulating greater interest in the Society, to the end that a larger membership shall be obtained. A number of canvassers have recently been employed for the purpose of securing members in New York City.

PUBLICATIONS

The Publications of the past year have been as follows:

American Jewish Year Book, 5664 (1903-1904), edited by Cyrus Adler.
Within the Pale, by Michael Davitt.
The Book of Psalms.
The Voice of America on Kishineff, edited by Cyrus Adler.
In Assyrian Tents—The Story of the Strange Adventures of Uriel, by Louis Pendleton.
THE BIBLE

The Book of Psalms is the first instalment of the new English translation of the Bible. It has been received with such éclat as to give encouragement to the great work which the Society has planned in translating the Bible into English according to the latest Jewish scholarship.

Attention is called to the fact that the sum of $213.31 is all that remains unexpended of the money contributed to the Bible Fund. Additional contributions must be received to insure the continuance of the work.

KISHINEFF FUND

Two of the publications of the year were issued in accordance with the following resolution adopted at the last meeting: "That the Publication Committee be requested to prepare from time to time, and the Board of Directors to publish and distribute in such manner and in such quantity as may be most effectual, information bearing upon the condition of the Jews in Russia."

"Within the Pale" was published in a special edition of the Society in accordance with an arrangement with the publishers of the regular edition. The other publication is "The Voice of America on Kishineff." Both were given a circulation outside of the regular membership of the Society.

The amount received for the Kishineff Fund was $5260. The amount expended for the manufacture and distribution of the books referred to was $5420.96, leaving a deficit of $160.96 against the fund.

Respectfully submitted by the Board of Directors,

EDWIN WOLF.

Membership

The Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Membership presented the following:

The Committee on Membership reports that several recommendations have been made at various times. One of these was that committees should be appointed some time previous to the annual meeting, so that the subject could have some consideration, it being impossible to recommend any definite action without more time. Such being the case the undersigned recommend that the present plan of obtaining members be continued.

The report was adopted.
Publications

The Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Publications presented the following:

In the opinion of the Committee the most important publication of the year was the Book of Psalms, transcending the temporary importance of the books on Kishineff and marking the beginning of the issue of the Bible. The translation is excellent, and the form of the publication adds greatly to the convenience and usefulness of the book.

The books on Kishineff are useful as historical documents, reporting the opinions of many men as well as the facts on which those opinions were based, concerning one of the most important events in recent Jewish history. This is their value to the historian. They have another and equally important purpose in informing public opinion and the public conscience of the world about the status of the Jew in Russia.

Although the Committee has not seen "In Assyrian Tents," it nevertheless assumes the risk of cheerfully approving this publication, first because it has confidence in the judgment of the Publication Committee, and second, because it strongly favors the issue of juvenile publications.

As to the future, the Committee expresses the hope that the publication of the Bible will be proceeded with, without delay, so that the Jewish public as well as the world at large may soon have a true and unprejudiced translation of that most important of all books.

In view of the valuable work done during the past sixteen years by the late Dr. M. Jastrow and the late Simon A. Stern the Committee recommends that a memoir expressive of the sense of obligation under which this Society rests toward these lamented valuable co-workers be published in the forthcoming Year Book.

The report was adopted.

Branches

The Chairman of the New York Committee, Mr. Cyrus L. Sulzberger, reported on the work of organizing the New York Branch.

On motion, the Chairman of the meeting, Dr. Hollander, was authorized to organize a local committee in Baltimore.

The Philadelphia members of the Board of Trustees were authorized to organize an Auxiliary Society on membership.

Statistics

Mr. Philip Cowen, of New York City, presented the following resolution:

Resolved, that a committee of three be appointed by the President to co-operate with any other committees appointed or to be appointed for the same purpose by other organizations to gather statistics of the Jews in America, and that the Board of Trustees be authorized to make such appropriation towards the cost thereof as the funds of the Society may justify.

On motion, the resolution was referred to the Board of Trustees.

The resolution in memory of Simon A. Stern adopted by the Board of Trustees in the morning was read.

Mr. Philip Cowen moved that the Board of Trustees be requested to appoint, a fortnight before each annual meeting, hereafter, a committee to whom shall be submitted such parts of the forthcoming annual report as it is deemed proper to submit for the special consideration of members at such annual meeting, and their report shall be presented thereat.

Adopted.

The meeting on motion adjourned.

In the evening, at a banquet, Mr. Morris Newburger was presented with a set of the Society's publications bound in red morocco leather which were issued during the time when he was president, as a testimonial in appreciation of his services.

CHARLES S. BERNHEIMER, Secretary.

[In pursuance of the recommendation made by the Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Publications, and adopted by THE JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY OF AMERICA at the above meeting (p. 398), the Publication Committee offers the following tributes to the memory of MARCUS JASTROW and SIMON ADLER STERN, members of its body from the origin of the Society until the day of their death.]
In the foregoing report of the sixteenth year of the Jewish Publication Society of America a triumphant note rings through the thrice-repeated announcement: The past year saw the publication of the Psalms, the first of the books of the Bible translated under the auspices of the Society. Why exult over the completion of a miniature volume, over a version that varies from other versions mainly in here a word, there a turn of the phrase, a heightened accent, the mechanical arrangement of the strophe, a particle making closer or less close the syntactical connection of sentences? In the strong-box of the Society lies locked up a mass of manuscripts and a mass of correspondence. They answer the question. The slender volume, its elegant simplicity, its minute scholarship, its detailed completeness, represent the care and thought of years; the care and ability of an enthusiastic translator; the care and acumen of revisers, sub-revisers, and super-revisers; the care, ability, and acumen of an untiring, conscientious editor. All the way through the mass, and all the way through another and bulkier mass lying beside it, but not yet vivified by the printer’s art, notes upon notes, now in black ink, now in red, run in and out on the margins, at the bottom, on the top, between the lines. The curiously close-cramped yet distinct hand, jagged yet in a way regular, fashions here a query, there a suggestion, now it tentatively puts an amendment, finally it gathers up the argument and points the way to a decision. The handwriting is Marcus Jastrow’s, the notes are his visible legacy to the Jewish Publication Society of America.

All men can follow up these evidences of devotion. Only his associates know how much ampler the legacy than the crowded notes betoken.

The Psalms had been put into type. All the editors and sub-editors and style revisers and members of committees had submitted their comments and suggestions. These had been collated, digested, and applied. Again and again the Hebrew and the English had been compared with each other, verse by verse, word by word, letter by letter, sign by sign. The final proof lay before the chief editor. A doubt—is this expression correct? Instantly the frail man was up and out of the armchair by the desk and across the room with a short, energetic step. He lifted the package of papers out of the iron safe, traced the development of the expression from copy to copy of the manuscript, and satisfied himself that he was presenting the views of the translator and his advisers. Back to his desk, only to repeat the process twice and three times on every page, for the sake of a word, for a comma, for the indentation of a line. At last he uttered the “imprimatur.” Before the order could be executed, the soul that had put so much of itself into the work fled the hindering body. The editor was not permitted to see the product of ten years’ labor.

On June 5, 1892, at a general meeting of the Society, the formidable project of a new English Bible translation was publicly framed. In December, 1903, the first booklet was finished. Who cares to count the meetings of committees in the interval, the consultations had between revisers and translators, the letters and reports written! And with all of them, since they concerned the Bible Translation, Marcus Jastrow was identified. This is his invisible legacy to the Jewish Publication Society of America.
Not yet has the whole magnitude of the heritage been set down. When Doctor Jastrow first undertook the chief editorship of the Bible, there was a tacit agreement among his associates of the Publication Committee to spare him other duties of the position. The Chairman of the Committee did, indeed, refrain for a while from assigning manuscripts to him for examination and report. But a Hebrew book was suggested for translation, a Talmudic study submitted, a liturgical essay received, a tale of Eastern Jewish life written, a history of the Jews, of Jewish literature was under consideration, and the sub-committee of readers needed his aid imperatively this one time yet. Laughing and shrugging his shoulders, he stretched out his hand for the manuscript and tucked it under his arm. At the next Committee meeting, without fail, there was a report, carefully elaborated in writing, treating of the subject matter and the style of the book, as well as of the practical question of its relation to the Society and to the needs of the members of the Society.

There is still more. Who does not remember the voice all but quenched in tears with which Marcus Jastrow pleaded for the Kishineff victims, and urged the Society to accept the proposition for the publication of campaign literature that should look to the amelioration of Russian-Jewish conditions? Was there any biennial or annual meeting of the Society at which his statuesque face was not seen to light up with a humorous or a trenchant thought, at which his voice did not give utterance to a wise or a stimulating thought? Was he not one of those who fought the battle for the History of Graetz when its publication was antagonized in open meeting? Nor was he less ready to espouse the cause of the book when to bring it out required his reading of the proof and a toilsome comparison between the translation and the original.

Once, indeed, he rendered the Society a doubtful service. It was at a meeting of the Publication Committee in the very early days—he was identified with the Society and the Committee from the beginning. The first book was about to appear. The type had been selected, the format determined, the order for the paper given, the legend on the side and back arranged. There remained only the momentous question of the color of the binding-cloth, momentous because the decision might affect all future publications. The Committee was divided into the partisans of the sombre and the partisans of the gay. Doctor Jastrow was sitting apart, and, weary of the arguments of the two sides, he engaged his nearest associate in conversation. Still the discussion on colors raged hot. "Whether red or blue, we want our books to be read," he suddenly ejaculated. The great question was decided amid laughter—how, all the patrons of the Society know.

Such disinterested sacrifice of time and working powers would suffice to justify the subvention the Society awarded "A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature," even if the Dictionary were not a monument of Jewish scholarship. As it is, the Society did but honor itself in causing its name to be connected with Doctor Jastrow's magnum opus, to which he gave over twenty-five years of his life, and from which he diverted his exclusive attention only when the Bible Translation made its appeal, which he regarded as all but paramount. Often in the later days when he was saddened by the death of friend after friend, he addressed to the sympathizers who were left the question, pathetic in its futility and in his insistent demand for an answer: "Do you think I shall be spared to finish my Dictionary?" Happily he was spared. A few hours before he was stricken while at work at his desk with the illness that resulted fatally five days later, he examined the last sheet of the Dictionary, containing its preface and its index.

To write a memoir of a man like Marcus Jastrow is a task worthy of distinguished ability, and we could not hope to do it justice. To our readers we may seem to have fallen far below adequacy if only by reason of dwelling, to the exclusion of all else, upon the period of scholarly retirement, the last ten or twelve years of a beautifully rounded life of seventy-four, each adult year of which was fraught with achievements for Jews and for Judaism. The space allotted us permits only a small canvas. Forced to limit ourselves, we chose his work for the Jewish Publication Society, which, when the whole picture was unrolled before the mind's eye, appeared, indeed, an epitome of his life, mind, and character.

The devotion he displayed in behalf of his Dictionary repeats itself in the Bible work, and with it go the scholarship and the love of accuracy amounting to a passion that characterize all his productions, from his "Vier Jahrhunderte aus der Geschichte der Juden" down to his editorial work for the Talmudic Department of the Jewish Encyclopedia, and his many scientific papers, popular lectures, and timely newspaper articles. The literary ability which, on its constructive side, was evinced in that vivid picture of his prison life at Warsaw, "Bär Meisels, Oberrabiner zu Warschau," reappears on its critical side in his painstaking and luminous reports on the manuscripts submitted to him. His public spirit, growing out of love for his people and out of love for truth no matter what the class of society affected, is revealed by the aid he gave to the minutely laborious and little appreciated task of building up a Jewish literature in the English language, no less than by his contest with Jewish obscurantism and his struggle against Russian degradation of Jews in Poland; or by his communal activity in Philadelphia in behalf of charitable institutions; or by the services he rendered the Russian Jewish immigrants; or his fervent espousal of Zionism; or his eager interest in American politics and national affairs. In the religious school of Michael Sachs's congregation in Berlin, on the lecture platform of Maimonides College, when superintending the religious school of Rodeph Shalom Congregation, as guide of the Jewish Culture Association, and at the Summer Assemblies of the Jewish Chautauqua, he was not more a teacher than in the committee room of the Publication Society. Only of him as a controversialist the last period of his life furnishes no typical picture. Not that he had grown less fearless or less enthusiastic or less capable of just indignation than in the days when he combated conferences and movements tending in his opinion to erroneous ends. The conservatism, the moderation, the philosophic regularity of living, which were so basic in his nature that they literally counteracted the ravages of disease, at the last triumphed wholly. They acted as solvents in which the acerbities of the hotspur period and the aristocratic aloofness of his middle age were mellowed into complete geniality.

In contrasting the present stage of Jewish development in America with earlier stages, the historical critic is in the habit of dwelling upon the lack of organizing ability among the rabbis of the past generation. The rabbis, it is said, were extreme individualists, the most Jewish of Jews in their revolt against organization. Marcus Jastrow, a rabbi of the old school, filled with the ideals, the traditions, and the inspiration of an earlier age, was yet modern to the core. Whether the question was the formation of a Board of Delegates of Civil and Religious Rights of the Jews of the United States, or the support of an Association of Jewish Ministers, or the founding of a Jewish Alliance, or propaganda for the Alliance Israélite Universelle, he stood for concerted action, and his activities for the welfare of this, the third Jewish Publication Society in America, are a striking instance of his faith in harmonious union. Like his efforts for the establishment of the second of the three American Jewish Publication Societies, they demonstrate not only that he favored and promoted organization, but also that, in spite of strong individuality and rare attainments, he was able and willing to practice the most rigid self-denial for the general good and subordinate himself to the accomplished organization.

And, finally, who will venture to question that this symmetrical personality was the result of the unified, single-minded training as rabbi which, in Warsaw, Mannheim, Worms and Philadelphia, or wherever his word was heard, made Marcus Jastrow a power as a religious leader?

So true is it that every act is the expression of the whole man, and with Marcus Jastrow every act was the whole noble man.

SIMON ADLER STERN

A string is broken, and the instrument
Whose harmonies throughout the bounteous days
Beckoned our hearts along serener ways,
Lies tuneless, without passion or lament.—
And unto those to whom its sentiment
Changed life's dull duties into hymns of praise
A note is stilled, e'en as they stand at gaze
In vain expectance of a cadence spent.

Yet not in vain shall this expectance prove;
For in our souls these melodies we hold
In ever dearer, unforgetting love,
Veining the coming years with fairest gold:
The sweet remembrance of a nobleness
That dwelt among us to uplift and bless.

FELIX N. GERSON.

In the death of Simon Adler Stern not only the Jewish community of Philadelphia but the world at large mourns the loss of a man whose life and attainments reflected the best and noblest qualities of the American Jew. He was beloved and esteemed by the foremost citizens of his community as well as by all whose good fortune it was to know him.

In Simon Stern the man stood higher than his works. In his personality there was a charm and gentleness that distinguished him as a man of culture and native refinement. He showed himself possessed of marked capacity as a writer and translator. He was recognized as a skilled musician and critic. Had he made literature or music his life work, the rank he would have gained in these arts would have been high and lasting. Even though he pursued these as avocations, he stood as the foremost authority among the Jews of America on literature and music. In him, however, art was not an end in itself, but a means towards producing the finished man of culture. It was this that won him his host of friends among all classes; it was this that made his life of special importance in a materialistic age.

He was born in Philadelphia on the 8th day of December, 1838, the oldest of nine children, five sons and three daughters having been born after him. His father was Julius Stern, a native of Germany. The elder Stern took, in his days, a hearty interest in Jewish affairs. He was one of the founders and the first president of the Keneseth Israel Congregation. Of his oldest son's musical talents he was particularly proud, and he gladly afforded him the opportunity to develop them. On one occasion he, with his son, was attending an entertainment at which it had been announced a juvenile violinist would astonish the audience by his musical ability. After listening to the performance, Mr. Stern declared that his son was able to play better. The remark was overheard, and the youthful Simon brought before the audience and a violin placed in his hands. His performance won the plaudits of the assembly.

When he had attained the requisite age, young Stern was sent to the public schools. In these he made such rapid progress that at the age of eleven he had passed through the grammar grades and was ready for admission to the high school. His youth, however, disqualified him for promotion. Perhaps this was fortunate, for the next two and a half years were devoted to music, German, and French—studies to which his talents were specially adapted, and which tended toward their early development. In 1853 he was admitted to the high school, where he remained two years.

His musical studies began with his eighth year. The instrument on which he performed, the violin, is the most efficient for the development of the true musician. Heine's statement of this truth, as rendered into English by Mr. Stern, is one of the most striking that has ever been made. He says:

The virtuosity of the violinist, unlike that of the pianist, is not merely the result of digital dexterity and technical proficiency. The violin is an instrument with almost human moods, and is in sympathetic accord with the feelings of the performer. The slightest annoyance, the gentlest emotion, the merest breath of feeling, is immediately re-echoed by it, and perhaps this arises from the fact that the violin is pressed so close to the heart that it hears its every throb. But this only applies to artists who have a heart. The cold and soulless violinist is always the same, and is able at any moment to reckon upon the implicit obedience of his fiddle. But this much-bepraised certainty of execution results from limited mental resources; for the greatest masters were those whose playing was not infrequently affected by disturbing influences from without or within.

Stern's first music teacher was Adolph Scherzer, and he afterward studied under Ahrens, Waldteufel, and Hauser. Even as a boy his proficiency on the violin attracted attention, and although never engaged in any professional entertainments, he was frequently called upon to display his talents.

He was in his seventeenth year when, in 1855, he left the high school and entered the millinery store of his father. After a few years he, together with his brother, David Stern, opened a millinery store under the firm name of S. A. & D. Stern. In this business he continued until 1871. He then associated himself with his brothers, Edward and Harry, in the printing and publishing business, the house being known as Edward Stern & Co. In this business, which has since assumed large dimensions, he remained for over eighteen years. The firm printed a number of books, magazines, and journals, and gained a wide reputation for the excellent typographical appearance of their work.

In 1887 the Finance Company of Pennsylvania was chartered, and Mr. Stern was selected as its treasurer. For fifteen years a large part of Mr. Stern's time and labor was devoted to the furtherance of its interests. About two years before his death, failing health compelled him to relinquish the work.

Although Mr. Stern's career as banker, printer, and merchant had been honorable, it was not due to these that he gained the distinction which he enjoyed.

His early taste for music, developed under good instructors, increased rather than grew less with advancing years. The youthful violinist became the devoted musician by whom the science as well as the art of music was studied, and in whom mind and ear and hand were in harmonious unison. Although never performing professionally, and very seldom in public, he was regarded as the best amateur violinist in Philadelphia. His skill with the violin and his love and knowledge of music brought him into close contact with some of the leading musicians in the country. Michael Cross's house was a centre for distinguished musicians, and there, at regular intervals, Mr. Stern met with Hennig and Schmitz, Jarvis and others equally devoted and equally distinguished in musical circles. Among his friends were Theodore Thomas and Carl Wolfson. Mr. Stern was one of the leading promoters of the Philadelphia Music Festival Association, of which he was likewise a director. He was also a director and treasurer of the Beethoven Society.

With Mr. Stern music was not a barren study; it did not result merely in "digital dexterity and technical proficiency," but ripened into a sound musical judgment that made him rank high among musical critics. His contributions on this subject were at one time somewhat copious. His first opportunity to express his critical ability came through the newspapers. He became the Philadelphia correspondent of Dwight's Musical Journal, of Boston. He contributed criticisms frequently to the North American, the Evening Bulletin, and other newspapers, by which his work was favorably regarded and accepted as accurate and correct. Not only in newspapers, however, but in such periodicals as the Penn Monthly his articles on musical subjects were welcomed and read with interest and pleasure.

Mr. Stern's musical criticisms naturally led him into the field of literature. He had from his childhood been devoted to his books—not, perhaps, with the close study and application of the specialist student, nor with the careless superficiality of the mere dilettante, but with the devotion and nice judgment of a lover of literature, and one whose delights are found in its pursuit. Not only was he familiar with the best works in English literature, but the French and German tongues yielded their best fruits to his grasp. In all three of these languages he had a ready and choice vocabulary, and his ability to converse with ease in any of them was of much service to him.

In 1873 his first permanent work of importance was published. It is a peculiar fact that the two authors whose works Mr. Stern translated from the German were Jews, both men of artistic temperament, and both among the foremost in German literature. "Do Boerne and Heine belong to Jewish history?" asks the historian Graetz. "Unquestionably," is his answer. It was the latter—Heine, the brilliant, yet unfortunate, genius—that Mr. Stern undertook to interpret in English. The book was entitled “Scintillations from the Prose Works of Heinrich Heine,” and was one of the “Leisure Hour Series” published by Henry Holt & Co. Charles Godfrey Leland had translated Heine’s poetry into English, but the prose works which Mr. Stern Englished had never before been translated. The book was introduced by a chapter on Heine himself. In this Mr. Stern gave a brief but clear account of the poet’s life.

Though he was not blind to Heine’s faults, he was still the devoted admirer of his great qualities. As he himself said, “Heine’s faults were, unfortunately, as patent as his virtues; but his genius was greater than either;” and although he condemned those who feel it their duty to apologize for Heine’s frailties and explain them away, he nevertheless asserted that “an enlightened critic feels forced to admit that in judging of the character and motives of a great genius, that genius must, to a certain extent, furnish the tests by which he is to be criticised.

The book itself consisted of two parts. The first was a translation of almost the whole of the “Florentine Nights,” a series of love tales told to a dying woman, in Heine’s most peculiar humor. The balance of the book consisted of excerpts from Heine’s works, in part personal and autobiographical, but mainly presenting his views on “Men, Manners, and Society,” on “France and the French,” on “Woman, Love, and Matrimony,” on “Art, Literature, Criticism,” on “Religion, Philosophy,” etc., on “Death and Immortality,” and miscellaneous. The excerpts are so aptly chosen that they give a rapid but very accurate insight into Heine’s genius and philosophy.
The book, which has been out of print for some years past, was a charming one throughout. Of Mr. Stern's translation it need only be said that it reads with the grace and force of an original work in the English language. To those unacquainted with the difficulties that confront the translator, and of the great variety in the quality of translations that exist, this may seem to have been an easy task. To have done it with the skill and care which Mr. Stern devoted to it, and which resulted in this finished production, required not only knowledge and understanding, but patient and continued application.

The second German-Jewish author whose works Mr. Stern translated into English was Berthold Auerbach, whose novels, depicting life not only among the great and noble, but more particularly among the lowly and obscure, are such graphic and faithful portraits of German life that they roused in the German public an unsurpassed degree of interest. The first work of Auerbach which Mr. Stern translated was "Waldfried," in 1873, and is not very widely known. It was translated in accordance with an agreement with Henry Holt & Co., the publishers of his "Scintillations." The best evidence of the faithful and satisfactory manner in which this work was done is that it was at Auerbach's own suggestion that Mr. Stern was selected to translate one of the best known of his books, entitled "Auf der Höhe." Stern's translation was published in 1875, by the Holts, and entitled, "On the Heights. A Novel. By Berthold Auerbach. Translated by Simon Adler Stern." In this long novel Mr. Stern displayed the same care as in previous works.

Among Mr. Stern's warm friends was Mr. Wharton Barker, the banker, and it was as the immediate personal representative of the latter that he went to China. Here he superintended with ability the important business with which he was charged. One of the results of his travels was the publication of the "Jottings of Travel in China and Japan" (1888), dedicated to Wharton Barker. The book is largely made up of letters written to his relatives and friends at home, and was published by the author at their earnest solicitation.

He left on the 9th of April, 1887, and returned on the 4th of September, after having visited a number of places in China and Japan. Several gentlemen accompanied him. Mr.
Stern brought home with him numerous valuable and interesting Japanese and Chinese articles, but nothing so valuable and interesting as the memories of the scenes and adventures of his journey as they are presented in his "Jottings."

This book is not a learned dissertation upon the habits, the customs, the occupations, the religions of these distant peo-pies; or an elaborate description of the climate, topography, the products, the finances, the exports and imports, the government and castes of these far-off lands, but it is simply the impressions made upon the writer in his travels through these distant and interesting portions of the globe. Throughout the whole book the personality of the author is gently manifest. He did not undertake to tell everything that can be seen, nor even all that he himself saw. It is on subjects that are most real to himself, in which he takes a personal interest, that one can write most interestingly, and it was to these things alone that Mr. Stern addressed himself in this compilation of letters which he sent to his friends. He brightly described the varied scenes spread out before him on his journey, the character and customs of the people whom he visited, and devoted a chapter to the great problems of intercommunication and finance in the Chinese Empire, with which his visit was intimately connected.

In addition to these literary labors Mr. Stern had been a contributor to a number of magazines on a variety of topics connected with literature and art. Foremost among these periodicals was the Penn Monthly, of which Mr. Stern was for several years the managing editor. The American, the successor of the Penn Monthly, also received his contributions, and he was for a time connected with the management of its publication. Some of the descriptions of countries in the catalogue of the Centennial Exhibition of 1876 were written by him, and he was also connected with its art department. He was the editor of the Industrial Review, a position which he occupied for many years.

While exercising a decided influence in the Jewish community, he never took a leading part in its communal affairs. In 1880 he was elected secretary of the Jewish Hospital Association, in which position he served continuously until the time of his death.

On the organization of the Publication Committee of the Jewish Publication Society of America, Mr. Stern was chosen a member, and his critical discernment and literary skill proved of great service in this place.

In the general community of Philadelphia Mr. Stern was well known and very popular. He was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and of the Union League. One of the founders and for a number of years a director of the Penn Club, he resigned his directorship when he went to China, though he remained a member. He was also a member of the Journalists’ and Mercantile Clubs, and was on the Publication Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association. He also formed one of the "Triplets," an organization of well-known men who meet together every month at the Penn Club house.

All these varied activities ceased when death claimed him, May 2, 1904, but the influence he exerted through them and through his genial personality upon the Jewish community of Philadelphia and the larger community outside will remain a monument to his memory for all time.
