DIRECTORY OF JEWISH ORGANIZATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

The inquiry resulting in the two Directories in this issue of the American Jewish Year Book, the Directory of Jewish National Organizations and the Directory of Jewish Local Organizations, in the United States, extended over a period of six months, from January 15 to July 15, of this year (1907). This explains why in some cases the officers given are not the last elected. Changes in local organizations occur so rapidly that names of presidents and secretaries furnished on the last of the dates mentioned may no longer be correct when this book leaves the press.

The branches of the National Organizations, where such are enumerated, were obtained direct from the headquarters of the central body. In the Local Directory, every organization, unless it responded to the first request for data, was addressed twice with a circular letter enclosing blanks (questionnaires). Some were addressed oftener, first through one and then another of their officers. In upward of forty of the larger cities, canvassing agents were employed. In many others the interest of prominent persons was enlisted, and their assistance was accorded the Editor to a generous degree. In spite of these various efforts to obtain guaranteed reports, to which must be added a mass of personal correspondence with individuals in all parts of the country, it proved impossible to secure official data in all instances. Indirect information, taken from newspaper accounts or other secondary sources, that is, derived in any way except from some one presumably authorized to speak for a given organization, is marked with an asterisk (*).

The Directory of National Organizations is arranged alphabetically by the names of the Organizations, and the branches of each alphabetically by towns. The Directory of Local Organizations is alphabetic by States, and in each State the arrangement is alphabetic by towns. The organizations of a town are grouped alphabetically under the following headings: I. Congregations; II. Charities; III. Mutual Benefit Societies (Sick and Death Benefit Societies, Kranken Unterstützungvereine); IV. Educational Societies; V. Miscellaneous Organizations: Literary, Musical, Social, Civic, Athletic, and Military Clubs, Communal Organizations, and Labor Unions; VI. Cemeteries. Under New York City three additional headings will be found: Communal Religious Societies; Communal Federations, and Communal Buildings.

It is important to note, however, that the divisions overlap each other to an extent defying classification and analysis. The Congregations are often Mutual Benefit Societies, especially in New York City; or Free Loan Societies (Gemilat Hasodim) are attached to them, as particularly in Chicago; or they have Sick Benefit (Bikur Holim), Burial Society (Hebra Kadisha), or Friendly Inn (Haknosat Orhim) features; or they do educational work, not only in their religious schools, Sabbath schools, and Talmud Torahs, but also through industrial classes, immigrant classes in English, and Hebrot of various sorts, Hebra Shas (for the study of Talmud), Hebra Mishnayat (for the study of the Mishnah), or Hebra Tehillim (for the study of the Psalms), etc. Again, the charities are largely educational in character, as, for instance, the Sisterhoods maintaining Kindergartens and classes of all sorts, not to mention the Orphan Asylums. There are clubs, too, like many of the Young Men's Hebrew Associations, that are educational and, in so far as they form neighborhood centres, charitable in their purposes and achievements.

The transliteration of the names of organizations, from the Hebrew, German, Russian, Polish, and other languages, is in the main that of the society furnishing the information. But to render the Directory of New York City in particular easily available, the cultural and historical purposes subserved by this scheme of transliterations had to yield to the reference purposes, and a slight modification of the rule in the direction of uniformity had to be adopted where names are duplicated and multiplied in varying orthographies. For instance Bene, Bne, B'ne, Benai, Bnai, B'nai, and Bnee, all appear as Bene, though when it was known that a congregation or society had a seal or an official designation, its own orthography was joined in parentheses to the other. SHAARE TEFILLAH is spelled according to the system adopted in the book; SHAARAY TEFILA is the form used by one congregation, and it appears in parentheses.

In New York, too, a rather extensive system of cross-references had to be made use of, to facilitate the finding of organizations known under two names, by their formal Hebrew name, or by the name of the town in Europe from which the majority of their members hail.

All descriptive additions prefixed to the names of congregations, as the word Congregation itself, Temple, Hebra, or Kahal Kadosh, with its abbreviations and variations, etc., are placed after the name proper.
Hebra Kadisha as the name of a society for burial purposes appears under Hebra (or Chebrah, etc.).

The population data are based upon estimates made by many of those who filled out questionnaires regarding organizations in behalf of which they had been addressed. When the estimates for a given place varied, the position of the correspondents in their communities determined the choice.
